ABOUT SAC

Welcome to Student Activity Centre(SAC)Insider! This comprehensive guide serves as a valuable resource for all SAC members providing essential information and guidelines to maximize your involvement and experience within our vibrant community. From understanding our mission and core values, to exploring the wide range of clubs, events, and initiatives, this handbook offers insights into the diverse opportunities available to you. Whether you're a student leader, participant or supporter, we invite you to dive and embark on an exciting journey of personal growth, collaboration and unforgettable experiences at the SAC.

STUDENT JOURNEY

The Student Activity Center (SAC) is a pivotal hub where students embark on a transformative journey from their freshman year to graduation. It explores the skills gained, the introduction to SAC and its clubs, holistic growth in technical and soft aspects, the impact on placement drives, and the cultivation of entrepreneurial skills. The entrepreneurial spirit is thriving within SAC as well.

The center is providing an incubation platform for students to pursue their innovative ideas and start their ventures. By organizing entrepreneurship events, mentorship programs, and pitch competitions, SAC is inspiring students to think creatively, develop business acumen, and cultivate an entrepreneurial mindset. The Student Activity Center, with its clubs, mentorship programs, and emphasis on holistic development ensures that every student's time at the university is enriching, empowering, and truly transformative.

How SAC works ?

The university's Student Activity Center (SAC) acts as the central nerve for orchestrating a rich tapestry of student endeavors. Their dedicated team meticulously plans and coordinates an array of events annually, spanning festivals, academic conferences, sports competitions, and cultural showcases. The SAC acts as a receptive portal for event proposals from students and clubs, rigorously assessing their viability and alignment with university protocols and available resources. Moreover, the SAC team employs varied channels, including social media, newsletters, and collaboration with the university's media arm, to zealously promote and market events, ensuring their broad reach and impact across the campus.

SAC: Your Club Success Partner – We're here to help clubs thrive on campus, enhancing student engagement and campus life.

Clubs register with SAC, providing mission and membership details, while adhering to university guidelines and policies to ensure alignment with the institution's standards.

Clubs must adhere to the established university guidelines and policies, ensuring that their activities and events comply with the university's rules and regulations.

SAC offers orientation and workshops, equipping club leaders and members with essential skills, from club management to budgeting, fostering effective leadership development. The orientation and workshops offer guidance on how to navigate the challenges of running a club, plan engaging events, manage finances, and foster effective leadership within the club. This support helps club members become more effective leaders and event organizers.

Experienced mentors guide club executives to organize successful events, while SAC allocates budgets and funding based on proposals, ensuring effective financial management.

Clubs are responsible for submitting comprehensive budget plans and managing their finances effectively. This ensures that clubs have the resources they need to bring their ideas to life.

SAC assists in securing venues for various events, and post-event evaluations gather feedback to assess success and identify areas for improvement, enhancing the overall club experience.

Student Council

"Unlock your potential, shape the future, and lead with purpose -
Join the Student Council for a brighter tomorrow!"

The primary purpose of a student council is to advocate for student needs and concerns, plan and organize school or university events, and engage in various activities that promote a positive campus culture. It works to foster a sense of community and campus spirit by organizing activities and events that bring students together.

Student councils represent the concerns and interests of students to school or university administrators. They may advocate for changes in policies, improvements to facilities, and other issues that affect students.

Many student councils have faculty or staff advisors who provide guidance and support to the council members. Advisors may assist with logistics, mentorship, and ensuring that the council adheres to campus policies.

Being involved in a student council can have several benefits for students, including personal growth, leadership development, networking, and the opportunity to make a positive impact on their university community.

The student council oversees a diverse range of student-run clubs encompassing technical, cultural, innovation, outreach, and society-related initiatives, as well as professional bodies/chapters for students pursuing specialized fields of study or interests.

The student council manages a portfolio of student-run clubs spanning various areas, including technology, culture, innovation, outreach, and community engagement, as well as chapters dedicated to students pursuing professional interests and careers.

SELECTION CRITERIA

Academic Excellence & Research Interest:

We prefer students with strong academic knowledge and a research-oriented mindset for roles in the Academic Council, Research Council, and Technical Council.

The Director of Academics and the Dean of R&D directly mentor this team, working to enhance academic efficiency, promote research-related activities, and increase technical involvement of students in various projects.

Specialized Skillsets:

Students with core specialized skills are selected for committees like the Anti-Ragging Committee, Women Empowerment Cell, Quality Analysis Committee, Discipline Council, Grievance Council, Department Academic Council, and Department Development Council.

These selections are made by the Head of Departments, Principal, and Dean IQAC to address specific institutional needs and goals.

Co-Curricular Activities:

We seek students with exceptional skills beyond academics for positions in the Sports Council, Hostel Council, Transport Council, Event Council, Outreach & Society Council.

These students are mentored by the Director-SAC, Dean of Student Affairs, Event Convenors, and Clubs Council to ensure the smooth and efficient operation of their respective areas, with a focus on continuous improvement.

From City Lights to Natural Delights

Exploring Maredumilli and Mothugudam

The sun hung low on the horizon as our car cruised along the smooth highways of Andhra Pradesh. We had embarked on a road trip, starting from Hyderabad, with a destination that promised to be a refreshing escape from the mundane – Maredumilli. Our excitement bubbled as we left the bustling city behind and ventured into the heart of nature.

As we approached Maredumilli, the landscape underwent a dramatic transformation. Lush greenery enveloped us, and the air became fresher with each passing mile. The road seemed to narrow as we delved deeper into the Eastern Ghats, winding through thick forests and quaint villages. It was as if nature was slowly embracing us, preparing us for the immersive experience that lay ahead.

Upon reaching Maredumilli, we checked into a cozy forest resort nestled amidst the tall trees. The symphony of chirping birds welcomed us, and we couldn't help but feel in sync with the natural world around us. Our days here were filled with adventure – trekking through dense forests, exploring pristine waterfalls, and encountering exotic flora and fauna. We even had a chance to interact with the local tribes, learning about their sustainable way of life and deep connection with the land.

One morning, we embarked on a riveting canopy walk, suspended high above the forest floor. As we strolled along the narrow bridges, the sheer beauty and biodiversity of the forest became evident. The rustling leaves and distant calls of animals underscored the fact that we were mere guests in this enchanting ecosystem.

Leaving Maredumilli behind, we headed towards Mothugudam, a place that couldn't be more different from the serene wilderness we had just experienced. Mothugudam was home to a colossal all-year-working powerplant, a testament to human engineering and innovation. As we approached, the towering smokestacks came into view, billowing clouds of steam into the sky. We took a guided tour of the power plant, marveling at the intricate machinery and the magnitude of energy production. The control room was a futuristic marvel, with technicians monitoring every aspect of the operation. The sheer scale of the operation left us in awe; it was a stark contrast to the simplicity of life in Maredumilli.

The drive between Maredumilli and Mothugudam was a journey through contrasts. We descended from the tranquil ghats of Maredumilli to the flat plains leading to the power plant. The transition was almost surreal, a shift from the untouched beauty of nature to the relentless hum of industry.

As we completed our journey and bid farewell to Mothugudam, we reflected on the incredible diversity of experiences we had encountered in a single trip. From the pristine forests of Maredumilli to the imposing power plant in Mothugudam, we witnessed the incredible range of human and natural marvels that Andhra Pradesh had to offer.

Our road trip had been a revelation, reminding us of the delicate balance between man and nature, progress and preservation. It was a journey that allowed us to get closer to nature in Maredumilli and appreciate the marvel of human achievement in Mothugudam. As we headed back to Hyderabad, we carried with us memories of a journey that had expanded our horizons and left us with a profound appreciation for the world around us.

Movie Revies

Pride & Prejudice

A timeless classic that defines romance in a way that hasn't been observed before and it is arguably the best adaptation of the novel of the same name written by Jane Austen. Keira Knightley & Matthew Macfadyen do an amazing job of capturing the essence of the characters as written in the book, not bordering the generic top method that actors turn to when delivering book adaptations.

One of my personal favorite scenes is the famed hand flexing scene. What's especially appealing about this shot is that it relies purely on human expressions, body language and the idea of "eyes speak more than words ever will." rather than background score or transitions.

Despite of there not being a single— what people label as a "steamy scene", this film really exhibits romance of its true virtue and nature through puissant words and expressions. This quintessential romance film does not just grasp romance as a concept poise or as two individuals being in love, but rather explores it through themes of gender, social norms, class, bias, etc.

Overall, a wonderfully crafted film adopted from a wonderfully crafted novel.

WHIPLASH

"Not Quite My Tempo!" is an exhilarating musical thriller exploring the journey of an obsessed artist facing the terror of his pedagogy.

whiplash describes everything a person who aspires to be "remembered" craves and terrifies. Damien Chazelle is an absolute genius for being able to turn a conventional student-teacher relationship into a trepidation-inducing thriller. miles teller nails his role as an obsessed artist, who finds himself turning a blind eye on the pain he's being inflicted upon while striving to be the best—and to get approval from his mentor. jk simmons delivers his part flawlessly & and the emphasis on flawlessly isn't enough. the audience can literally feel the weight of every word he utters; raw and unabridged. this movie has left a permanent mark in my mind and its impact is noteworthy.

Mission Impossible: Dead Reckoning Part 1

The epitome of an action thriller and built of the essential action film starter pack!

Yet again, McQuarrie and Cruise strikingly break the boundaries of what an action film is conventionally made of and offer the viewers something more than just fight choreography and generic dialogues. This movie really sets itself apart from the other installments in the Mission Impossible series and what really stands out is how well the film has been crafted emotionally. Despite a couple of scenes being rushed through, character development has been handled in a way that hasn't been seen before.

Characters, especially, Ethan and Grace are dealt with profundity and fragility. As the last but one installment in the film series, the sense of impending doom and climax can really be felt throughout the film with a classic nod at the nostalgia of characters, scenes, and flashbacks from the past films along with hinting at a send-off to Ethan Hunt—everyone's favorite renowned fictional spy.

The cinematography and the way the camera panning choices really stand out and are a perfect combination with the gripping suspense and mind-bending stunts. Overall, the film has been an immersive experience the background score is spot-on like always! A film filled with moments where you'll cry, laugh, fume with anger until you're bordering on the edge of your cinema seats and loads of breath-taking action sequences

Top Gun: Maverick

it has you cackling with laughter and has your eyes welling up with tears. Top Gun: Maverick is an escapade of emotions and adventures. despite having been 36 years since the first movie hit the cinemas, the sequel manages to deliver the right amount of nostalgia and callbacks. As an avid geek and action movie lover, the combination was put together conveniently in the film. most of the sequences were filmed practically which really adds to the cinematic experience. Although the ending seemed somewhat delusory and illogical, it is important to keep in mind that the aim of this movie is to entertain which is exactly what it does! (but the critic in me begs to differ lol) The f-18 super Hornets are always a pleasure to see, along with the Sukhoi (s) making a surprise appearance demonstrating some impressivemaneuvers. The F-14 does appear at some point under somewhat absurd circumstances hinting at a slightly nostalgic note and not to mention, the cruise's own p51 in action is stellar to watch. if you're a top gun lover AND a sucker for aviation, you'll surely be intrigued by the surprisingly(somewhat) accurate terminology AND some pretty applaudable maneuvers. (even with certain scenes being as unrealistic as they seem)

Doctor Strange: Multiverse Of Madness

Now, that was one hell of a movie! Despite Disney's imposition of age-appropriate constraints, Sam Raimi manages to make the whole of what's been handed to him, breaking the barriers and formats that most Marvel movies fail to achieve.

michael waldron somewhat redeems himself for the disastrous character assassination of Loki in Loki (2021, but that doesn't last long due to lackadaisical writing for at least a quarter of the film).

overall, I'd say it'll have you on the edge of your seats, barely giving you a moment to register from scene to scene although you see that becoming the film's weakness at times.

do not walk into the theatre expecting to see some generic superhero saving the day as this movie isn't fan service for the most part and that's what carries this film— the nuance of a Doctor Strange movie!

Danny Elfman does a pretty good job in elevating the nerve-wracking scenes with decent auditory imagery

Poems

luminescence

they hide in the absence of light hoping to emerge from the shadowing midnight set aflame in the envious night they can't help but feel jealous of the great white with hands chained tight and eyes with a lack of sight their legs lunge them forward to take part in this unknown fight a fight for what's neither wrong nor right but a fight for them to come out alight into the blinding whites to once again ignite

lullaby

i can hear you sing the lullaby but it doesn't phase me like it used to because the ebbing youth took a part of me too i can hear you mumble the lullaby neither of us knew what growing up would do i can hear you whisper the lullaby don't stress, i don't blame you for bidding the tasteful ripeness of youth a distasteful adieu eventually, i can only see you mouth the lullaby the words which were once easily said are no longer able to get through the newly built walls which are too hard to undo

Those who cover my moon very often
Those who show off their beauty
On the canvases of blue, pink, purple and orange
Those beautiful fluffs
Always in white and sometimes grey too
Those huge cotton candies
Who pull out shapes without anyone's hand Mesmerizing....aren't they?
But sometimes they feel heavy
They come down
They fall.....

They turn into this enchanting happening called
Rain

No one thought falling could be so beautiful until it comes to Rain.....

Coming back to our beloved fluffs
Did anyone ever think that the cute huge beings can be dangerous too?

The 'thundrous' feeling they create due to their agnst....

Clouds you say....agreed!
But Heart too...i say...you must agree...

Pages Apart

In the lively halls of Adams University, amidst the vibrant stream of laughter, there existed a quiet soul named Emma. She was a quiet soul, a seeker of worlds within the pages of books, and a weaver of tales with her pen. To a casual observer, Emma seemed like the soul of the party, always surrounded by a circle of friends. Yet, despite the laughter and the smiles with which she was always surrounded, there was a quiet ache that echoed in the chambers of her heart.

Like stars scattered across the night sky, Emma's interests shone brilliantly, though they occupied a celestial plane far away from the spheres her friends traveled. While they lost them in the rhythm of dance, the thrill of sports, and the artistry of expression, Emma found solace in the written word, in the serenity of libraries, and in the gentle swing of ink on paper.

Her room, furnished with towering bookshelves, was a sanctuary of imagination. The shelves sagged, burdened by the weight of a bound world waiting to be unlocked, while her desk was scattered with papers, a testament to the stories that flowed from her mind to her fingertips. Her friends, though they tried, could never understand her passion. Her sanctuary lay in the hush, the reflective, the timeless.

As the seasons changed, she watched her friends rehearse dance routines, listened to the animated conversations about concerts and parties, and smiled with them in moments of shared joy. Yet there was a part of her that yearned for something more, something that spoke to the core of her being.

Loneliness often paid her a visit, a phantom companion that clung to her like a second skin. It wasn't that her friends lacked affection; they just conversed in a distinct language of enthusiasm. Their eyes danced with the joy of performance, while hers glimmered with the zest of invention. They gravitate towards the limelight, while she sought solace in the quiet corner of a café, with a beloved, dog-eared novel. Emma knew that she had to bridge the gap, to find a way to connect her world to theirs. She started to attend dance rehearsals, cheering from the sidelines and even attempting a few awkward moves herself. In turn, Emma invited them to her world. She shared her favorite books, carefully selected to match their tastes, and encouraged them to explore the world she loved. As the semesters passed, Emma's friends began to appreciate the beauty in her passions, and in turn, she learned to step out of her comfort zone.

She learned that True friendship is not about sharing every interest, but about embracing the diverse hues that make each person unique. It is about finding the threads that bind hearts, even when the fabric of passion may seem worlds apart

The Journey Beyond Examination

In a small town in Maharashtra, there lived a determined young man named Aman. At seventeen, he possessed a fire in his heart that burned brighter than the morning sun. His goal? Conquering the formidable mains examination. Aman's room became a sanctuary of dreams and ambitions. Pages turned like a rhythmic beat of heart, pencils etched the lines of determination, and walls echoed with the hum of endless questions. His dreams painted the walls of the room, filling it with aspirations that reached the sky. Weeks turned into months, and Aman's pursuit of knowledge became a Voyage. Like a deep-sea diver, he dug into the world of textbooks, resurfacing with a reservoir of wisdom that outshone his own anticipations. His dreams were crafted with every word he underlined, every concept he mastered every formulae he memorized. As the exam day approached, the whole town was wrapped in a hushed excitement, a sense of eager anticipation blanketed the town, a feeling that an extraordinary event was on the edge of happening. Friends and family stood beside Aman. To them, he represented a guide of hope, a living testament of the possibilities that lie within the spirit of youth. Their support was unwavering as the north star. As Aman walked into the examination hall, he carried the weight of his dreams and the untold expectations of his parents on his shoulders. He attacked each question with the precision of a maestro. His mind is full of knowledge and preparation. The clock ticked away, each second a marathon in the heartbeat of mains. When the exam results were revealed, the whole town held its breath once more. It landed like a bombshell, a sudden whirlwind amid a peaceful day. Aman had not cracked it.

WHISPERS OF HEALING

Her name was Mia, she was in 4th year engineering at st.Xavier's college mumbai.

Her early years were a blend of light and darkness,she had to encounter both sunshine and shadows, though she gathered up all the courage in her to go through her parent's separation, her parent's divorce has had a lasting impact on her past and present life.

Childhood wasn't easy for her and neither was writing it down. picking up the pen felt easy but putting it on a piece of paper- translating her trauma wasn't. as dusk turned into dawn with each passing day, she couldn't find herself to describe her thoughts any better. Loud noises of the utensils falling down from the table,from the hands of her parents and their words cursing each other of how horrible the respective others made their lives flooded her mind every time she held the pen."it's humoring how one person can effortlessly touch a heart full of roses with thorns" was all she wondered.

Soon,college life began and tables have turned. and that marked her journey with pages.

As the morning sun cast a warm hue across the college campus, she stepped towards the waiting bus. With an air of determination,she climbed up the steps, her backpack slung over one shoulder. Her eyes,aglow with a mix of anticipation and curiosity,scanning the seats and faces that filled the vechile.Each passing row bought her a moment of hope,Her eyes were drawn to specific spots,pausing for an extra breath.Every face that passed received her careful scrutiny, measuring each seated person for that one-of-a-kind essence that might quicken her pulse.And then as her hopes slowly started to fade away,there he was, Abhay,huddled among the passengers,his presence electrified the atmosphere, sending a charge through the surroundings.A soft smile played upon her lips. Their eyes met, silently acknowledging the beautiful accident that had brought them together in that moment.They were in the same class,met at the 3ed day of college.As they got to know each other, their conversations flowed effortlessly,laughter resonated through the corridors and their hearts resonated in a sync. They discovered shared interests, beliefs and a sense of belonging that felt like coming home.

When they were together, an unspoken understanding enveloped them, a connection that surpassed spoken words. They discovered profound empathy that went beyond verbal exchange. His kindness was a balm to her wounded soul, a gentle touch that healed the fractures left by years of pain. His words formed a cocoon of security and comfort. He listened, not with judgment, but with a compassionate heart that sought to understand the depth of her pain. His support became a beacon of hope, clearing the path to a journey of healing and revival. His love became a shield, protected her from the storms that raged within her. He showed her that she was worthy of love and deserved happiness, gently dismantling the walls she had built around her heart. Held close in his embrace, she encountered the inner peace and power, a refugee to let go of the burdens she carried from the past. Slowly but surely, he helped her reclaim her sense of self, nurturing the blossoming of a new, resilient spirit. Together, they forged a path towards healing, one that was paved with love, understanding, and unwavering support.

Through the losses and triumphs of college life, their bond grew stronger. Together, they navigated the challenges, celebrated the victories, and found solace in each other's arms.

He made her realize that trauma will forever remain as a scar, but scars are healed wounds. Soon, it hit her! how especially important this person was in her life. hobbies don't feel like a chore anymore for this person offered her the wisdom that reconnecting isn't a sin.

CASE OF THE MIGHTIEST MR.WATER!

This was the story of a Beast.
He was known as Cateloo.
Who could even effort a great feast,
a big Palace too.
Yet not a drop for his thirst.
Sorrowing in need of Mr. Water, he could find no use.
Water was only a dissenter, seeking revenge for the abuse.
Cateloo's death was close.
Alas! he finally died on 22 March 2041.
Police looked into the whole case.
They held Mr.Water responsible.
Mr. said that it was not a revenge,
but he had a serious issue.
It was the mistake of his tiny foot.
Which didn't allow him to run fast.
He was almost to help Mr.Beast, but in no time he bite the dust.
Police then had a completely different aspect.
The roots of Cateloo's death were deep down.
Police peeped and discovered tip as his size.
They concluded that he was made mightiest by human,
due to their improper utilization.
Case finally ended with man into his own prison.
SAVE WATER, SAVE LIFE!

GREY

The world seems to be grey Not black, not white because they symbolize something
But grey? Does it merely symbolize the nothingness?
Life is grey.
The constant routine that you want to escape from.
But once you're out, you feel incomplete
That's when you have to choose
But why can't you have both;
Doesn't grey consist of both black and white?
But life doesn't work that way whatever you choose, you may have to lead the way with no regrets.
How do we know if we've made the right decision?
Only time will tell
By then you will get used to it and that's when you are at the start point again; grey.
And this will go on and on till your very last day.
Is there a way to change it?
We may never know...

KARMA

Fawning over the tainted piece,
Was it ever yours in the first place?

The blessing that was bestowed upon you, Turned into a curse ,a dreadful one

You, who chose your destiny all by yourself.
Was it fun seeing your loved ones,
no longer near you

And what was the reason? Blinded by desire?
For me, who was a bystander, an audience in your filthy-seeking life was a joyful experience

You ask me who I am,
Well ,the answer lies within your question.
But it isn't the right time to haunt me down
Cause all I ever was a you to for you search bystander.

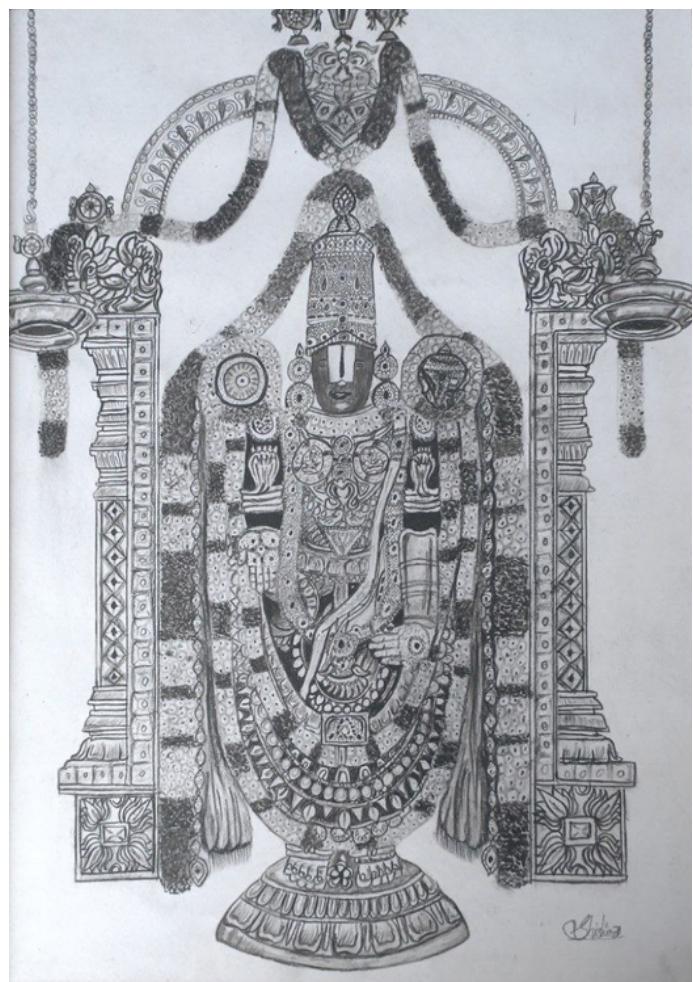

I never asked you to make a desicion,
It was your ill fated instinct which followed my devil's advice
It wasnt me, rather you were blinded by greed.
It wasnt me, rather the jealousy which drove you insane
Lets say, I brought the destruction upon you
But It was with your own hands, you've brought this,
So called Wrath of Karma

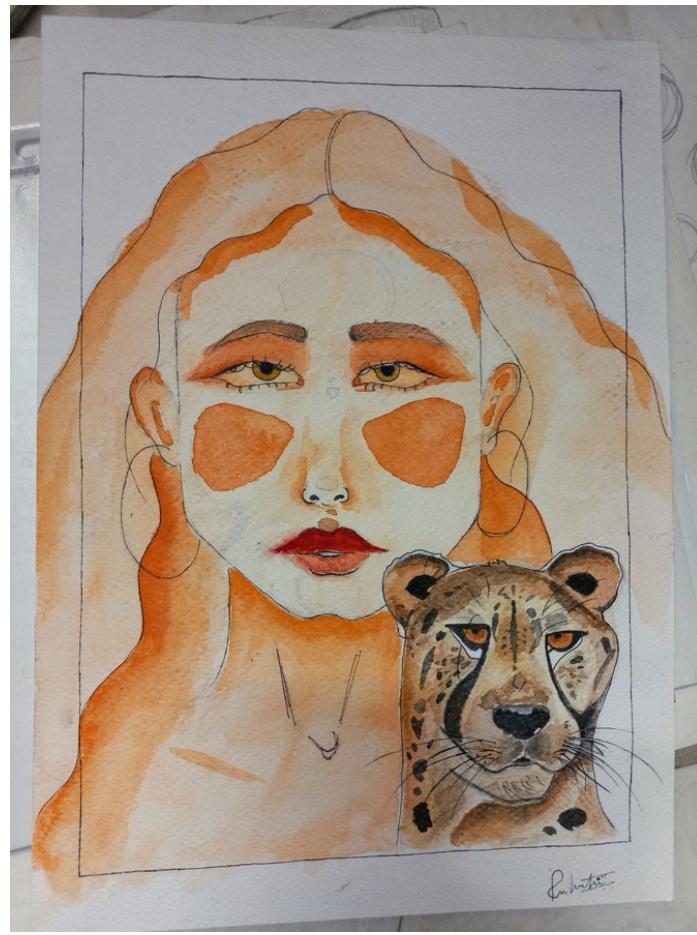

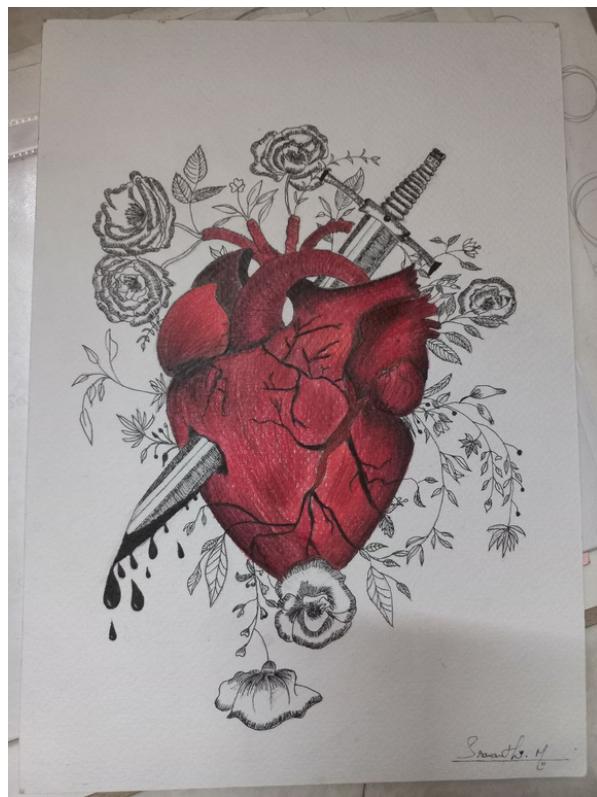

"A Tale Untold"

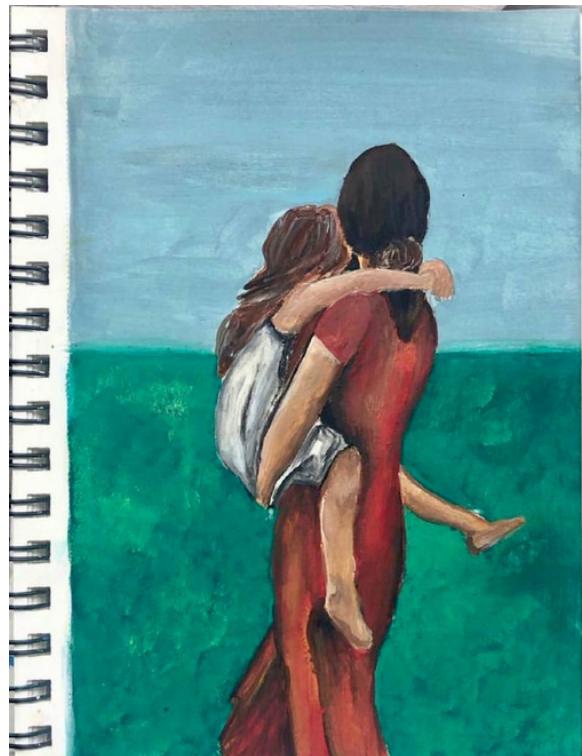

In shadows cast by timid heart, There lies a tale of unspoken art,
Of a girl whose radiance touch the sky, Yet my fearful tongue can't reach that high.
Hoping one day I'll find the strength, To break these chains and go to any length.
To tell her of the beauty she possesses, To confess the heart that silently confesses Though fear holds me captive, a prisoner true, I'll forever admire the girl with eyes of the universe's hue.
